Clinical studies show that blood lipid metabolism is often affected by hyperthermia, particularly atherogenesis and thrombogenesis. To clarify the biochemical basis of these disorders of lipid metabolism, blood samples from various species were examined by means of thin-layer chromatography. In the above, the lipid composition of the blood was also measured by means of gas chromatography. Studies were carried out on dogs, rats, rabbits, chickens and man, and they showed: 1) High temperatures (41-43 degrees C) produce increases in levels of fatty acids, cholesterol and triglycerides in the blood. 2) Higher temperatures enhance the synthesis of lipids and increase the levels of fatty acids, cholesterol and triglycerides in the blood.// // Created by Davide Caroselli on 29/05/15. // #ifndef KSWIFT_ARRAYLIST_H #define KSWIFT_ARRAYLIST_H #import #import @class KSWDArray;
